

1
2
3
4
5
6 UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT SEATTLE

7 VIRGIL C. SHADE,

8 Plaintiff,

9 v.

10 NANCY A. BERRYHILL, Deputy
11 Commissioner of Social Security for Operations,

12 Defendant.

Case No. C15-1180 MJP

ORDER REMANDING FOR FURTHER PROCEEDINGS AND PAYMENT OF BENEFITS

13 Plaintiff, Virgil C. Shade, seeks review of the denial of his 2011 application for 14 Supplemental Security Income (SSI) and Disability Insurance Benefits (DIB) for a closed period
15 ending June 19, 2015. Plaintiff contends the ALJ erred in evaluating his severe impairments, 16 rejecting three medical opinions, and evaluating what jobs he could perform. Dkt. 36 at 1. As 17 discussed below, the Court REVERSES the Commissioner's final decision and REMANDS the 18 matter under sentence four of 42 U.S.C. § 405(g) for further proceedings on the DIB claim and 19 an award of benefits on the SSI claim.

20 BACKGROUND

21 Plaintiff is 54 years old, has a high school education, and worked as a cashier, cook, 22 dishwasher, garbage collector, and cleaner. Tr. 299. Plaintiff's first applications for SSI and 23 DIB were denied and became administratively final on February 2, 2010. Tr. 286.

1 In February 2011, plaintiff applied for the DIB and SSI benefits at issue in this case,
2 alleging disability as of February 2007, amended to February 3, 2010. Tr. 286. Plaintiff's
3 applications were denied initially and on reconsideration. Tr. 286. After the ALJ conducted a 4 hearing in June 2013, he issued a decision in December 2013 finding plaintiff not disabled. Tr.
5 286-301.

6 THE 2013 ALJ DECISION

7 The ALJ separately analyzed the DIB and SSI claims, because DIB claims require a
8 finding that disability began before the date last insured. Tr. 289. For both claims, the ALJ only 9 considered the period beginning February 3, 2010, the day after plaintiff's previous claims denial 10 became administratively final.

11 For the DIB claim, the ALJ found that plaintiff met the insured status requirements of the 12 Social Security Act through June 30, 2010. Tr. 289. The ALJ then used the five-step disability
13 evaluation process set forth in 20 C.F.R. § 404.1520, finding that for the period from February 3
14 to June 30, 2010:

15 Step one: Plaintiff did not engage in substantial gainful activity after the amended
16 alleged onset date of February 3, 2010.

17 Step two: Plaintiff had the following severe impairments: degenerative disc disease and 18 lumbar strain.

19 Step three: These impairments did not meet or equal the requirements of a listed
20 impairment.¹

21 Residual Functional Capacity (RFC): Plaintiff could perform sedentary work, with a 22 slight decrease in balancing, and no climbing stairs or working at unprotected heights.

23 Step four: Plaintiff could not have performed past relevant work.

Step five: Because jobs exist in significant numbers in the national economy that

¹ 20 C.F.R. Part 404, Subpart P, Appendix 1.

1 plaintiff could have performed, plaintiff was not disabled.

2 Tr. 289-90.

3 For SSI benefits, the ALJ considered the period beginning February 3, 2010, and, using 4 the five-step disability evaluation process set forth in 20 C.F.R. § 416.920, found:

5 Step one: Plaintiff has not engaged in substantial gainful activity since the amended
6 alleged onset date of February 3, 2010.

7 Step two: Since the date he filed the SSI claim, February 28, 2011, plaintiff has the 8 following severe impairments: degenerative disc disease, depression, posttraumatic stress 9 disorder (adult-onset), and personality disorder.

10 Step three: These impairments do not meet or equal the requirements of a listed
11 impairment.²

12 Residual Functional Capacity: Plaintiff can perform sedentary work. He needs to shift 13 postural positions, for example from sitting to standing/walking, without leaving the 14 workplace and without loss of productivity. He can frequently crawl and climb ramps or 15 stairs.³ He can occasionally stoop, crouch, and balance. He can never climb ladders,
16 ropes, or scaffolds. He must avoid concentrated exposure to vibration and hazards

17 Step four: Plaintiff cannot perform past relevant work.

18 Step five: As there are jobs that exist in significant numbers in the national economy that 19 plaintiff can perform, plaintiff is not disabled.

20 Tr. 290-301.

21 In June 2015, the Appeals Council denied plaintiff's request for review, making the 22 ALJ's decision the Commissioner's final decision. Tr. 302. In July 2015, plaintiff filed a third 23 application, for SSI benefits only. Tr. 446. His third application was granted in November 2015, effective June 2015, based on degenerative disc disease and anxiety disorder. Tr. 396, 1561.

21 ² 20 C.F.R. Part 404, Subpart P. Appendix 1.

22 ³ There is no explanation for why the ALJ found plaintiff could not climb stairs for purposes of 23 DIB (until June 2010) but regained the ability to "frequently" climb stairs for purposes of SSI
(from February 2011 onward). Compare Tr. 290, 292. "Frequent" means one-third to two-thirds of a work day. See SSR 83-10, 1983 WL 31251, at *6 (Jan. 1, 1983).

1 The disability evaluator wrote that plaintiff's "medical condition has no major changes from the 2 time of ALJ review. ALJ decisions [are] adopted in this claim." Tr. 1570. Based on plaintiff's
3 age, education, previous work experience, and an RFC limited to sedentary work, the 4 Commissioner's Medical-Vocational rules directed a conclusion of disability. Tr. 1574 (citing 5 20 C.F.R. Pt. 404, Subpt. P, App. 2, Table No. 1, Rule 201.14). There was no need to consider 6 plaintiff's additional nonexertional limitations beyond the sedentary exertional limitation.
7 Plaintiff had been 49 at the time of the ALJ's decision in 2013. Tr. 299. Turning 50 moved him 8 into the "closely approaching advanced age" category, which, in combination with his 9 unchanged education, work experience, and sedentary RFC, mandated a conclusion of disability.
10 20 C.F.R. Pt. 404, Subpt. P, App. 2, § 201.00(g).

11 In addition to filing his new SSI claim in July 2015, plaintiff also filed for review in this 12 court of the ALJ's 2013 decision denying his second application. Dkt. 1. The Commissioner
13 acknowledged being unable to find the ALJ's decision and hearing recording, and requested 14 remand to find the materials or, if unable to find them, to hold a new hearing and issue a new 15 decision. Dkt. 18. The Court granted remand in May 2016. Dkt. 27. The Commissioner finally 16 located the material, moved to reopen this case, and filed the administrative record with the 17 Court in March 2018. Dkt. 33. The Court now reviews the ALJ's 2013 decision denying 18 plaintiff DIB and SSI benefits, for a closed period from February 3, 2010, (the day after the 19 previous decision became administratively final) until June 2015, when SSI benefits were 20 granted on plaintiff's third application.

21 DISCUSSION

22 Plaintiff contends the ALJ erred by finding plaintiff did not suffer from a severe pain 23 disorder, finding his conditions did not meet or equal a listed impairment, rejecting three medical

1 opinions, and relying on jobs inconsistent with his RFC. The Court concludes that the ALJ erred
2 by rejecting the opinions of plaintiff's treating physician, Sara Anne Fleming, M.D. Because Dr.
3 Fleming's opinions, if credited, establish disability for purposes of SSI benefits, the Court need
4 not address plaintiff's other assignments of error. With regard to plaintiff's DIB claim, the Court
5 concludes that the ALJ erred in failing to consider whether medical evidence after his date last 6 insured can establish an onset date before his date last insured.

7 A. Medical Opinions of Treating Physician Sara Anne Fleming, M.D.

8 "Generally, the opinion of a treating physician must be given more weight than the 9 opinion of an examining physician, and the opinion of an examining physician must be afforded
10 more weight than the opinion of a reviewing physician." Ghanim v. Colvin, 763 F.3d 1154, 1160
11 (9th Cir. 2014). A treating physician's opinion will be given "controlling weight" if it is well-12 supported by medically acceptable clinical and laboratory diagnostic techniques and is not 13 inconsistent with other substantial evidence in the record. Id. An ALJ may only reject an 14 uncontradicted opinion of a treating physician for "clear and convincing reasons" supported by 15 substantial evidence. Id. at 1160-61. Even if contradicted, an ALJ must consider the length and 16 quality of the treatment relationship, frequency of examination, supportability of the opinion
17 with medical evidence, and consistency with the record as a whole. Id. at 1161. Contradicted 18 opinions may only be rejected based on "specific and legitimate reasons" supported by 19 substantial evidence. Id.

20 Dr. Fleming became plaintiff's primary care physician in November 2011. Tr. 661. In 21 January 2013, Dr. Fleming opined that plaintiff was "severely disabled to the point where he 22 cannot sit for any significant period of time" and can stand for only 30 minutes maximum, citing 23 a November 2011 MRI showing laminotomy, scarring, and advanced disc disease at L5-S1 and

1 disc disease at L4-5 and L3-4. Tr. 661. Dr. Fleming also opined, based on treatment records,
2 that plaintiff had “significant impairment from depression” that created severe mood lability,
3 agitation, and impulsive behaviors “to the point where he is not able to interact normally with 4 most other people.” Tr. 661.

5 In May 2013, Dr. Fleming further elaborated that the November 2011 MRI showed 6 advanced degeneration of plaintiff’s lumbar spine at L5-S1 “with nerve involvement.” Tr. 794.
7 Dr. Fleming explained that her conclusions were based on “[her] physical examinations, [her]
8 observations, and [her] review of [plaintiff’s] medical records” and that she believed plaintiff
9 was “unable to maintain even a sedentary or sit down job.” Tr. 794. Dr. Fleming also explained 10 that it was “medically reasonable that he would miss work at least several times a month due to 11 flares with his back pain.” Tr. 794.

12 The ALJ discounted Dr. Fleming’s opinions for several reasons, none of which withstand 13 scrutiny.

14 The ALJ discounted Dr. Fleming’s opinions because the opinions rely on “only one or 15 two superficial physical examinations of the claimant’s back” and are primarily based on 16 plaintiff’s self-reports. Tr. 296. This mischaracterizes the opinions and the record. The 17 opinions rely on MRI findings as well as multiple years of treatment records. Tr. 661, 794, 710-
18 793. “[T]reating physicians are employed to cure and thus have a greater opportunity to know 19 and observe the patient as an individual....” Smolen v. Chater, 80 F.3d 1273, 1285 (9th Cir.
20 1996). Only treating physicians can make observations over time, such as difficulty sitting 21 during a session, making inappropriate comments to clinic employees, pacing and agitation. See,
22 e.g., Tr. 777, 765, 735. “[W]hen an opinion is not more heavily based on a patient’s self-reports
23 than on clinical observations, there is no evidentiary basis for rejecting the opinion.” Ghanim,

1 763 F.3d at 1162.

2 The ALJ also discounted Dr. Fleming's opinions because Michael Gofeld, M.D., said the 3 MRI was "old" and did not cause him to recommend a change in the management plan. Tr. 297.
4 The ALJ cites to a supposed management plan that is missing from the record. See Tr. 297
5 (citing "B16F18," which is not found in the record). Given how long the Commissioner has had 6 to produce a complete record, the Court is not inclined to permit any further delays. The ALJ
7 refers to Dr. Gofeld as a "specialist" but does not say what type of specialist, while the record
8 reveals only that he is in the Department of Anesthesiology. Tr. 297, 798. Nothing in the 9 available record casts any doubt on Dr. Fleming's opinions that the 2011 MRI shows severe 10 degenerative disease, supporting the conclusion that plaintiff cannot sit or stand for long and 11 would miss multiple days of work per month due to pain flare-ups. The Commissioner argues 12 that Dr. Gofeld's statement implies that the abnormalities shown on the 2011 MRI were 13 longstanding, but a November 2011 MRI is highly relevant to a disability determination for 14 claims filed in February 2011 and dating back to February 2010.

15 The ALJ discounted Dr. Fleming's opinions because an August 2011 examination by 16 Ethan Babcock, M.D., showed nearly "full sensory and motor function throughout the lower 17 extremities." Tr. 297. But Dr. Babcock's examination revealed abnormal results in deep tendon 18 reflexes, lumbar flexion, and straight leg raise, and his findings were "[n]otable for paravertebral 19 muscle spasm." Tr. 582-83. In addition, Dr. Babcock relied on a 2006 MRI and obviously did 20 not consider the results from the November 2011 MRI. Tr. 580. The ALJ's reasoning that the 21 2011 MRI is "old" is inconsistent with his reliance on Dr. Babcock, who saw only a much older 22 2006 MRI, to discount Dr. Fleming's opinions.

23 The ALJ also discounted Dr. Fleming's opinion as inconsistent with her own findings

1 because “her treatment records do not reveal any chronic issues with paravertebral muscle
2 spasms.” Tr. 297. But Dr. Fleming included in her opinion letter only that plaintiff “has 3 paravertebral muscle spasms,” not that they were observed in every office visit. Tr. 794. And 4 Dr. Babcock, on whose findings the ALJ relies to discount Dr. Fleming’s opinions, did observe 5 paravertebral muscle spasm. Tr. 583.

6 In short, none of the reasons the ALJ offered to discount Dr. Fleming’s opinions are 7 specific and legitimate enough to discount this long-time treating physician’s opinion. “In many 8 cases, a treating source’s medical opinion will be entitled to the greatest weight and should be 9 adopted, even if it does not meet the test for controlling weight.” Orn v. Astrue, 495 F.3d 625, 10 631 (9th Cir. 2007).

11 The Court concludes the ALJ erred in rejecting Dr. Fleming’s opinions that plaintiff
12 cannot sit for any significant period, cannot stand for longer than 30 minutes, would miss work 13 several times a month due to back pain flare-ups, and has significant impairment from 14 depression.

15 B. Date of Onset

16 In order to receive DIB payments, plaintiff must establish that his disability began by 17 June 30, 2010. Plaintiff’s degenerative disc disease is a progressive impairment. While the 18 November 2011 MRI established greater severity than the 2006 MRI tests, it is unclear when 19 exactly the impairment became disabling. The ALJ concluded that because there are no medical 20 records between February and June 2010, there was no evidence that plaintiff became disabled 21 during that time.

22 Although plaintiff has the burden of proof to establish his disability, the ALJ has the duty
23 to assist in developing the record. See Armstrong v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec. Admin., 160 F.3d 587,

1 589 (9th Cir. 1998). The critical date for disability compensation is the date of the disability's
2 onset, not the date of diagnosis. See Morgan v. Sullivan, 945 F.2d 1079, 1081 (9th Cir. 1991).
3 Where, as here, a claimant is found disabled but it is necessary to determine whether the 4 disability arose at an earlier date, the ALJ must apply the analytical framework outlined in SSR
5 83-20 to establish the onset date of disability. See Armstrong, 160 F.3d at 590; DeLorme v.
6 Sullivan, 924 F.2d 841, 848 (9th Cir. 1991); see also Sam v. Astrue, 550 F.3d 808, 811 (9th Cir.
7 2008) (noting that in Armstrong and DeLorme SSR 83-20 applied because "there was either an 8 explicit ALJ finding or substantial evidence that the claimant was disabled at some point after 9 the date last insured, thus raising a question of onset date").

10 SSR 83-20 defines the onset date of disability as "the first day an individual is disabled as 11 defined in the Act and the regulations." SSR 83-20, 1983 WL 31249, at * 1 (Jan. 1, 1983). In 12 the case of slowly progressive impairments, SSR 83-20 does not require an impairment to have 13 reached the severity of an impairment listed in the regulations, as required under step 3, but 14 "[t]he onset date should be set on the date when it is most reasonable to conclude from the 15 evidence that the impairment was sufficiently severe to prevent the individual from engaging in 16 SGA (or gainful activity) for a continuous period of at least 12 months or result in death." Id. at 17 *3; see Armstrong, 160 F.3d at 590 (stating that the onset date is determined by the date when 18 the impairment became disabling and not just present).

19 Under SSR 83-20, an ALJ must consider three factors when determining the onset date of 20 disabilities of a non-traumatic origin: (1) the claimant's alleged onset date; (2) the claimant's 21 work history; and (3) medical and all other relevant evidence. See SSR 83-20, at *2. The 22 claimant's alleged onset date is the starting point of the analysis and "should be used if it is 23 consistent with all the evidence available." See id. at *3. Nevertheless, medical evidence is "the primary element in the onset determination,” and the established onset date “can never be inconsistent with the medical evidence of record.” Id. at *2, *3.

Where the medical evidence fails to establish an exact date on which an impairment or impairments became disabling, the ALJ must “infer the onset date from the medical and other evidence that describe the history and symptomatology of the disease process” and should seek the assistance of a medical expert to make this inference. Id. *2. Where no reasonable inference is possible based on the available evidence and additional medical evidence is not available, “it may be necessary to explore other sources of documentation ... from family members, friends, and former employers to ascertain why medical evidence is not available for the pertinent period and to furnish additional evidence regarding the course of the individual’s condition.” Id. at *3.

Plaintiff’s degenerative disc disease is a slowly progressive impairment. While the November 2011 MRI established greater severity than the 2006 MRI tests, it is unclear when exactly the impairment became “sufficiently severe to prevent [plaintiff] from engaging in SGA” for at least 12 months. SSR 83-20 at *3. The fact that there are no medical records between February and June 2010 does not establish that plaintiff’s onset date occurred after June 2010. Tr. 290. The Court concludes the ALJ erred by not calling a medical expert to assist in inferring the onset date or, if needed, exploring other sources of documentation from lay witnesses.

C. Scope of Remand

Plaintiff requests the Court remand his case for an award of benefits. Dkt. 36 at 17. In general, the Court has “discretion to remand for further proceedings or to award benefits.” Marcia v. Sullivan, 900 F.2d 172, 176 (9th Cir. 1990). The Court may remand for further proceedings if enhancement of the record would be useful. See Harman v. Apfel, 211 F.3d 1172, 1178 (9th Cir. 2000). The Court may remand for benefits where (1) the record is fully developed

1 and further administrative proceedings would serve no useful purpose; (2) the ALJ fails to 2 provide legally sufficient reasons for rejecting evidence, whether claimant testimony or medical 3 opinion; and (3) if the improperly discredited evidence were credited as true, the ALJ would be 4 required to find the claimant disabled on remand. Garrison v. Colvin, 759 F.3d 995, 1020 (9th 5 Cir. 2014).

6 With regard to SSI payments, the Court finds that the record is fully developed and 7 further administrative proceedings would serve no useful purpose. This case addresses a closed
8 period that ended upon plaintiff receiving a determination of disability effective June 2015. The 9 Court further finds that the ALJ failed to provide legally sufficient reasons for rejecting the 10 medical opinions of Dr. Fleming. If Dr. Fleming's opinions were credited as true, the ALJ 11 would be required to find plaintiff disabled because the vocational expert testified that an 12 employee who needed one break per day in addition to customary breaks or who missed work 13 "one to two times a month" would be unable to sustain employment. Tr. 1629-30. The 14 extraordinary amount of time this case has languished due to the Commissioner's inability to 15 produce a full record also weighs against introducing any further delay for additional 16 proceedings. The Court remands for an award of SSI benefits.

17 With regard to DIB payments, however, the record is ambiguous as to whether disability
18 was established by the date last insured of June 30, 2010. The Court remands for further 19 proceedings to determine the onset date.

20 CONCLUSION

21 For the foregoing reasons, the Commissioner's final decision is REVERSED and this 22 case is REMANDED under sentence four of 42 U.S.C. § 405(g) for an award of SSI benefits 23 and for further proceedings concerning the DIB claim. On remand, the ALJ shall call a medical expert to help infer an onset date and, if needed, obtain lay witness testimony.

DATED this 16th day of July, 2018.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Marsha J. Pechman", written over a horizontal line.

MARSHA J. PECHMAN
United States District Judge